WELL RAISED

Huey Long is raising more—well let us say calm—to the square inch than any man the length and breadth of the nation.

I have often wondered if a person had his choice whether he would most desire to be feared or admired? Adulation is more evanescent than fear. The latter has a tendency to stick around and become very annoying.

IS HE ANNOYING?

At the present time the Kingfish is flicking his verbal gloves in the face of Big Jim Farley, administration politician, extraordinary, and causing the latter's face to resemble more than ever a piece of raw beef. And if the President gets in the range of the gloves, he also, is the recipient of a few choice blows in the region of his official anatomy where it hurts the most. USE DISCOVERED

There is an old-time theory that not a thing is put on earth except for some use. In certain instances that use has not been discovered. Never until recently could I understand how a man of Long's type and caliber could be tolerated in public life, but recent events have disclosed the reason—his main mission in life is to be a thorn in the side of the administration. And he can effectively be just that, for he recognizes no rules in playing the political game and takes more satisfaction in delivering a foul instead of a fair blow. He also nonchalantly ignores the rules of the supposedly august body of which he is a member, the United States Senate.

GETS THEIR GOAT

The ancient custom of exonerating courtesy is a job with this queer piece of humanity from Louisiana with the result that he gets on the nerves of his enemies to the extent that they lose their judgment and attempt to engage in a struggle with him. Senator Joe Robinson, Senate administration leader, a few days ago attempted to skin Huey and hang his hide on the wall of that chamber. That was a mistake. No man of Robinson's breeding and innate courtesy has a chance with men of Huey's ilk. Better exchange headlines with a street gamer, who may tell you to "button up your face," than with a man who is a law unto himself. (Continued on Page 5)

D.A. Appoints Local Man As Investigator

Melvin P. Myatt, 134 Ninth street, Richmond, is the new investigator for this office of the district attorney.

Myatt's appointment was made by District Attorney Francis P. Healey last Saturday and "he started work immediately. Under the county salary ordinance the new official will receive $197 per month and mileage.

Myatt is well-known in this city, having been a resident here for years, and for the past fifteen years has been a pilot on one of the boats of the Standard Oil company.

District Attorney Healey is speaking of the appointment last evening said that it had not been his intention to fill the vacancy, that existed in this position, but matters in the county had taken a turn that required the use of an investigator.

Myatt has already started collecting evidence, said Healey, in connection with the proposed opening of the dog track. Last week I announced that I would prevent the operation of the track, Jerome, the owner, has denied me and it is necessary to expect money to keep it closed. I proposed to do it. The dog track appointment, about Myatt's appointment, and he will be kept on as long as I consider it necessary.

Speaking of Sports

ATLANTA, Ga., March 11.—UP—Bobby Jones is putting around now in an earnest effort to improve his greens, games in preparation for the Masters open golf tournament at Augusta, April 4 to 7.

The Masters' tournament is the one competitive affair in which the famous Bobby returns to meet the stars. Up until last year when he played in the first annual Masters' tournament, he had not competed in tournament golf since 1926 when he made golf a grand slam by winning the four major tournaments of England and America.

Finished 13th last year, Jones finished 18th along with Deane Stute, then British open champion, Walter Hagen and others. He wasn't in bad company at all, but he believes that more attention to his putting will put him nearer the top this year.

It was his putting that put him in 12th place last year so he is out to improve that. He's not going to the extreme in preparing but he is spending more time away from his law practice this year than he did last. His practice rounds over the Lake country club here have been tight around par.

185 Golfers Invited

Jones is president of the Augusta National and invitations have gone out to 138 golfers to compete in the $5,000 golfing event that was won last year by Horton Smith.

Smith will be back to defend his title and a field of 75 of the better known golfers are expected to compete.

The invitation list included the first 24 finishers in the Masters' last year, all past and present open and amateur titleholders and others. Many foreign golfers also have been invited.

TROJANS BEAT C. S. C. TO WIN COAST TITLE

CORVALLIS, Ore., March 11.—UP—Southern California won the Pacific Coast Conference basketball championship tonight from Oregon State in the last 20 seconds of play when Ernie Holbrook, looped a long shot from mid-court to put the Trojans in the lead 32 to 31.

Each team had won a previous game.

Holbrook was sent into the game with only a minute left to play, after being relieved about the middle of the period by Garrison. This was his only score of the game.

Oregon State, after a somewhat lagged first half, in which they were on the low end of a 18 to 14 score came back with a rush in the second period and with free throws by Wally Palmer and Earl Conkling, and a spectacular field goal by Hibbard, forged ahead 20 to 19 after four minutes.

Immediately following Palmer and Lee Gutero, Trojan center, got into a mixup and a double foul was called, the fourth on Gutero. Both made their attempts good but Bob Muth, Trojan, came back with a free throw to tie the score.

Hibbard broke the score with a free throw on Howell's foul, but Jack Hupp came back with a long shot that put Troy in the lead again. Garrison added another but a free toss and a field goal by Follen and a tip-in shot by Mose Leman, gave the Staters a 29 to 25 lead with three minutes to go.

Oregon State began stalling and waited for setups before shooting. It was lanky Jack Hupp, star Trojan forward, who really put Troy in a position to win the game when he stole the ball and dribbled halfway down the floor to sink a basket and bring his teammates within a single point of the Staters.

The game was rough with 36 fouls being called.

High Nine To See Action In Contest Today

By LEONARD HUNT
The R. U. H. S. baseball team will play its first game of the season today when it meets the University High School here at Seawright field.

The Richmond team has only about a month to get in trim before the opening of the A. C. A. L. Other teams have a slight edge over Richmond with their season starting last week.

With an experienced catching and pitching staff the prospects are bright for a successful team this season.

Earl Edwards and Leonard Smith, regulars from last year's team will be on the mound today. Carl Tlaga is another prospect.

Behind the plate will be either Don Eganall or John Bulljohn, veterans of last year, while first base will be held down by Bob Moore, a converted outfielder.

Leo Costa and Ike Roacha will fight it out for third sack. Other veterans in the outfield will be two letter men of last year, Fred Ball and Gene Corr.

Cruelty, Desertion Charged In Suit

MARTINEZ, March 11.—Cruelty and wilful desertion are alleged by Andy W. Harmon of Richmond in a suit for divorce filed in superior court here today against Mrs. Marie W. Harmon through Attorney Leo G. Marcollo of Richmond.

Married November 27, 1923, the couple separated on November 2, 1933.

Harmon charges that his wife threw kitchen utensils at him, compared him with certain relatives, telling him how rich they were and how poor, inconsequential and shiftless he was, and told him she wished he would leave her so she could go back and live with her rich relatives. He also claims she called him names.

In a tie, Estes Snedecor, legal adviser to Governor Martin, who has only one leg, played State Supreme Court Justice Harry Belt, who has but one arm. They both scored 89, Snedecor won the last two holes to tie.

Huber was asked by Councilman Peter Larsen who was to determine whether the business was lawful or not.

Such an ordinance would be worth much to the merchants, if properly handled, was the statement made by Beck. He said the council had the power to grant or deny a license and could control the types of business operating in the city.

Beck also said that if the council granted a permit it could not put the chief of police on the spot because it would be their own responsibility.

Councilman W. F. Huber reported that the sewer pipe at Gladys and Norvell streets, had been repaired.

TO COMPLETE PROJECTS
Huber also reported that the park projects in Mira Vista and on Terrace Drive would be completed by the SERRA and that new projects could be submitted for approval.

NO INSURANCE TAKEN
No action was taken by the council on insuring the chemical trucks of the fire department on account of the cost of the insurance.

City Clerk Fred J. Prosser said it would cost $131 per truck to carry 5,000 property damage and $10,000 liability insurance.

Councilman J. R. Beck said the trucks were not worth that much money and they should be junked rather than insure them.

CROSSING DISCUSSED
Further time was granted Street Commissioner W. F. Huber for his report on the opening of the crossing at Knott avenue.

A meeting was held last Saturday between Huber, City Engineer H. D. Chapman and Superintendent J. A. Christie of the Santa Fe.

Christie informed him if the crossing was constructed, it would cost the city about $2,000 and the city would have to get permission from the railroad commission.

Huber said he would obtain a right of way from the Terminal Railway for nothing if the railroad commission sanctioned the new crossing.

WANT TRUCKS REMOVED
The railroad tracks on Moens Lane will be removed if Councilman Huber can get permission from the Bates & Borland Co., on whose property they are situated.

Permission has already been received from the Santa Fe to remove the tracks and if agreeable to the Harry company it will be submitted as a SERRA project for approval.

TO AID LEGION
Mayor Hans M. Nilsen appointed Councilman Peter Larsen to obtain donation of $75 from some local citizen in response to a letter from the Louis Hagen Post for funds to decorate San Pablo avenue for their celebration to be held March 23, 29, 30 and 31.

Larsen stated that due the small amount of money in the treasury some local person should donate the money.

No action will be taken on the request of the American Legion for a permit to hold night dances at Cerrito Hall, until Larsen makes his report next Monday night.

10 Are Slain, 16 Wounded In Cuba General Walkout

HAVANA, Cuba, March 11.—UP.—Cuba rated uneasily tonight under a military dictatorship in which the dominant figure was Fulgencio Batista, once a hard boiled army sergeant, now chief of staff of the entire Cuban military forces.

Authorities declared a state of war extending throughout the turbulent island, with Col. Batista as President Carlos Mendieta's right hand man, determined to prevent a general strike—with the implication of revolution—at all costs.

ARMY IN SUPPORT
Behind Mendieta and Batista the army seemed solidly aligned and the general public was another in its attitude toward the strike, which is led by students, anticlerical (anti-clerical revolutionaries) and ABC oppositionists to the present government.

In the terrorism and sporadic fighting that has shattered the peace of Cuba's black nights, at least 10 persons have been killed and 16 more wounded.

The government's declaration of a "state of war" makes the army not only the police force of the island, but its courts and judges as well.

COURT RULES HEAVILY

Summary military courts have the power to inflict the death penalty upon offenders and disturb—and those knowing Fulgencio Batista say he will not hesitate to inflict it—"when necessary for the public order."

Failure of President Mendieta to quell out certain radical elements from governmental posts when he took office as provisional president in January, 1934, is regarded as a serious tactical error. They are the same elements called responsible for today's disturbances.

STRIKERS RETURN

There were some indications that the backbone of the strike was beginning to give way, many of the government employees who walked out went back to work this morning, especially in the communications and postoffice departments. Forty-four out of 56 bureau chiefs in the department of communications agreed, according to Secretary Pelayo Casero, to summon their subordinates back at once.

More than 1,000 minor officials were expected to obey the order.

Onetah Tribe To Pay Visit To Two Lodges

Two fraternal visits have been planned for Onetah Tribe of Red Men. It was announced last night following a business meeting of the lodge, Emil Esola presided.

On Friday night the lodge will visit at Alameda and on the following Monday night will trek to Vallejo to attend a meeting there. As a result, no meeting will be held at the local lodge hall next Monday.

Several social events have been planned by the lodge.

AUGUSTA, Mont.—(UP)—Montana's heaviest snow of the year is believed to have fallen recently on Mrs. Katherine Warner. The snows dressed 500 pounds and yielded 100 pounds of lard.

Otherwise their places will be filled by soldiers and the mails will be "adequately protected."

Postoffice officials said the service would be normal by the end of the week.

Business activities of the entire island, however, were hampered by the operations of the strikers, and transportation facilities were almost non-existent for a time.

Successor

COADJUTOR Archbishop John Mitty who will succeed Archbishop Hanna as head of the San Francisco archdiocese.

Warm Welcome To Member Given By City Council

Councilman Walter Johnson was present at the meeting of the city council last evening for the first time in ten months. Johnson is just getting about following an accident in which his leg was broken.

He was welcomed by Mayor Geo. F. Irwin, and replied that he was happy to again be in position to attend the meetings and thank the city officials and his friends for their many acts of kindness during his long absence from the city.

ANNUAL MEETING

The institution was extended the council to attend the annual banquet of the Contra Costa Realtors to be held at the Berkeley Country Club on the night of March 15th. D. D. Nelson of Brentwood will preside and the guest of honor will be the state president.

DEPARTMENT REPORTS

The city treasurer reported a balance of $179,372.37 on hand. During the month of February $19 visits were made to homes by the Richmond Health Center.

Receipts from the building department for the past month were $45 from the electrical department $30.20 and from the plumbing department $128.50.

Saar Chief

JOSEPH BUERCKEL, Nazi Saar Commissioner for the Territory during the last phase of rule by the League of Nations Commission, who was installed as Saar Governor by the German Minister of the Interior William Frick, after the Saar officially returned to German rule. He was Hitler's choice for the position.

Work Bill Vote Is Blocked By Kingfish Long

WASHINGTON, March 11.—UP.—Administration leaders fought vigorously tonight to stop a determined attempt to earmark the $4,000,000,000 work relief bill as Senator Huey P. Long warned that part of the money would be used for political purposes in 1936.

Although he occupied the floor fewer than 20 minutes today, Long effectively blocked any real action on the measure which has been deadlocked in the Senate for six weeks.

He cautioned the Senate against giving Mr. Roosevelt "five billion dollars to spend in getting re-elected" and informed his colleagues that cotton prices had dropped 200 points today. He attributed this loss to confusing statements of administration officials concerning the possibilities of monetary inflation.

The remainder of the time he sat patiently at his desk, listening to the debate. But his colleagues knew that Long was determined that no vote be taken on any amendment on the bill until there has been a vote on his resolution calling for investigation of Postmaster General James A. Farley.

HIGHER PAY IS DEMANDED BY SAILORS

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—The employers' union in the coastal strike of the tanker men, announced tonight its Secretary of Labor, Francis Perkins in Washington to end the trouble.

While the employers announced they were willing to arbitrate all matters in dispute, the men told the stand the issue of the closed shop did not permit of arbitration.

As one ship after another was tied up by the spreading trouble, the International Longshoremen's Association, which carried on last summer's coastwise maritime strike, watched developments closely.

It is too early yet to know if the strike will be a sympathy move. Members of the sailors' union of the Pacific were meeting tonight here to discuss strike plans, with officers declaring that 12 tankers now in San Francisco Bay will be tied up. Some 1200 men are said to be involved in the dispute.

GRIPPING IS DRAMA BILLED FOR FOX TODAY

"Society Doctor" a gripping drama of life within the walls of a metropolitan emergency hospital, and said to be a worthy successor to "Men in White" is the main screen attraction at the Fox theater today for the New Deal Bank Night.

"Society Doctor" is said to run the gamut of a life-time of human emotions, embracing into the brief space of eight hours and thereby providing one of the season's most gripping and unusual screen bits of the year. Chester Morris, Virginia Bruce, Robert Taylor, Billie Burke and Dorothy Peterson lead the cast of stellar film names appearing in the film.

Two Hits Tomorrow
"Murder on a Honeymoon" co-starring Edna May Oliver and James Gleason and said to be the lightest of screen thrillers, plus "Lottery Lover" a romantic triumph, are the two hits screened tomorrow for showing at the Fox tomorrow.

"Lottery Lover" besides being a gay romance, hosts an unusual film in Low Aynes, "Pat" Patterson, Peggy Fears and Richard Denning.

Mystery Story

"MURDER ON A HONEYMOON" in contradiction to the title is said to be a humorous hit. Featured players are Edna May Oliver and James Gleason. The play will be filmed at the Fox theater today.

Suitor Facing Murder Hearing In Court Today

SAN MATEO, March 11.—UP—Florence Alcide, 22 year old truck driver charged with the murder of his sweetheart, Kathleen Johnson, 26, will be given 15 preliminary hearing before Justice of the Peace Richard E. O'Farrell Tuesday.

More than 12 witnesses are scheduled to testify for the prosecution, while defense plans tonight were unveiled. State of defense Owen Kessel and Harry Hinkle, with R. S. Greene, Sacramento ballistics expert, are expected to be the chief prosecution witnesses.

Defense Attorney Gilbert D. Ferguson, prosecuting his first murder case since his training office, will attempt to prove Alcide shot the red-haired laundry worker the night of January 26, when her body was found in the street, a few blocks from her home, a bullet hole in her head.

Pinole Man Dies
Ill at the county hospital for some time, Wallace Brackley, 70, of Pinole, former resident of this community, died Saturday night. The body was taken to the Chapel of the Oaks in Oakland, where funeral arrangements are being made.

NEW YORK INSIDE OUT

By DON O'MALLEY

NEW YORK, March 11.—This has been an odd dramatic season. It started off with a bang, crowded houses for a while, reported sell-out business, but suddenly it seems to be falling to bits. There was actually a scarcity of legitimate playhouses. The booking offices were falling all over each other trying to find space for incoming shows. Rehearsals were held in empty business lofts because there weren't enough stages to go around. In another week or two you'll probably be able to pick from all the houses you want. A few shows are still making money, but the rest have either announced early closing, or are just about ready to throw in the sponge.

The explanation? Probably badly timed. There's nothing new in the world, but there's nothing new in the theater. Dramatic events got a big spread in the public prints, and a lot of artificial froth was kept bubbling over the theatrical glass. After a while audiences found out the plays weren't so hot, and then the froth just wouldn't bubble any more.

Most theatrical producers never learn.

FROM THE RANKS—Efrem Zimbalist, world famous as a violinist, has blossomed out as a conductor. He is wielding the baton for a series of Russian operas in town. Audiences are enthusiastic, but somewhat surprised at the transformation.

There's nothing new in Zimbalist's conversion. Most great conductors start out as instrumental performers. Toscanini originally was a cellist in an opera house orchestra. Gatti-Casazza was a piano soloist for a couple of decades. Koussevitzky first achieved recognition as a bass fiddle virtuoso.

They all had a good example. Beethoven as a young man played the viola in the court orchestra at Bonn.

ETHER MADHOUSE—Visitors to New York always want to see a broadcasting studio in action before leaving for home. A visit to their local madhouse wouldn't just be as well.

The jumping puppets of radio all serve one Master—Time. Imagine yourself doing each one of your daily actions according to a schedule divided into split seconds and you understand what the radio boys are up against. Managers dash

Search For Mrs. McCord Continuing

The grand jury has been called to meet Wednesday evening, but the subjects that will be discussed have not been disclosed. It is rumored that other angles of the McCord case will be taken up for consideration at that time, but nothing has developed which would bear out this claim.

100 PERCENT WRONG
MARTINEZ, March 11.—A report printed in a Martinez paper today, stating that the social service committee of the grand jury was in session here and held a conference with Sheriff John Miller on the McCord case proved both amusing and annoying to members of the grand jury. The report was just 100 percent wrong.

In the first place there was no meeting of the social service committee today. One lone member of the educational committee was in Martinez, obtaining data from the office of County Auditor Sullivan, being delegated to task by the other members of that committee. The auditor's office is in the old courthouse building, and she went there through the front entrance, departing by way of the stairs down through the basement. She did not go to the sheriff's office or talk to that official about the McCord or any other matter.

HIGHER WAGES ASKED

The strike calls for increased wages, preferential employment for sailors union members, and recognition of the union. Shirts were tied up today in ports from San Diego to Seattle.

Varying pay increases for the several types of seamen are sought, with common seamen asking an advance from $50 a month to $80.

Locally, the boats so far affected are the Associated Oil Company tanker Frank Buck, tied up at Avon, and the General Patton tanker Ennio, anchored in the harbor when its crew refused to move it to the Shell Company wharf at Avon. Another Associated tanker, was due in from San Pedro and was expected to be tied up as soon as she docked.

ASK INTERVIEW
Officials of the oil companies, announcing Washington, interview has been asked declared they were ready to submit all proposals to arbitration. They indicated they probably would increase wages, but backed at the question of union recognition.

Several interviews were due to dock at Bay ports soon and union officials said crews would be called off on arrival. At least one sailing with a non-union crew sailed without incident during the day.

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, March 11.—The girls who kick their legs aloft in Hollywood movie choruses are more beautiful than their New York theatrical sisters.

At least that's the opinion of Sammy Lee, noted dance director, and he should know, for he was with the late Florenz Ziegfeld for six years, handling the routine for the Follies, and such Broadway hits as "Show Boat," "Rio Rita" and "Smiles."

His assertion about Hollywood beauty was made after he had looked over 2,000 chorines. His present task is to select that number to 36 to appear in RKO-Radio's musical, "Hooray for Love."

Hollywood girls have a youthful freshness which outshines that of the Broadway chorines, he said. "The average age of the girls I have interviewed is 18 years. I could say the New York average is about 21."

"Eastern girls are more sophisticated than those in Hollywood, but their beauty has the stamp of worldly experience rather than the refreshing youthfulness which characterizes the girls in pictures."

Meanwhile Hollywood gossip is telling about the unusual fan letter May Robson received from a male admirer in Lima, O.

"Oh, girl, how I love you," the letter began. "I see others, but they are all as nothing compared to you, the idol and ideal of my heart."

"On the screen one sees beautiful women galore, but none of them appeals to me like you do. They do not begin to measure up to your beauty, intelligence, character, femininity and wondrous acting ability. When you pass from the screen to the stage, you are a motion picture theater again."

May has declined to reveal the name of the secret admirer.

The DAILY WASHINGTON MERRY GO ROUND

WASHINGTON, March 11.—For two years, ten people have entered the White House regularly every Tuesday and Friday to sit at a long mahogany table with Franklin Roosevelt and discuss with him the problems of the New Deal.

These ten comprise the greatest conglomeration of political faiths and economic walks of life ever to make up a Cabinet: two Republicans, one Hooverite, one New Englander, two from the solid South, one Far Westerner, one woman, one New York Jew, and one Tammany Democrat.

How have they come through the ordeal of the first two years? Have they developed, grown in stature, or become deflated? Here is an appraisal of them at mid-term.

CORDELL HULL—Secretary of State and number one man in the Cabinet, still is downcast because he thinks he does not get proper support from the White House, but still is fighting for the one goal of his life—reduced tariffs.

And he is finally beginning to get somewhere.

Aside from his reciprocity treaties, Hull is not absorbed in the general foreign policies of the United States, and his State Department pretty well runs itself through some very badly. He is slow, roundabout, extremely sensitive to criticism, but once he sets his mind on an objective he gets there, no matter how long it takes.

HENRY MORGENTHAU—Secretary of the Treasury, is one who if asked by Franklin Roosevelt to get a slice of the moon, would struggle desperately to reach it.

He remains the Cabinet member and, without John Dickinson, assistant secretary, his department would be completely stymied.

He is fond of talking about the birds, the flowers, the trees, morally—anything except the subject at hand. An ardent prohibitionist, Roper now fumbles at a cocktail, although no one can quite sure whether any of it passes down his gullet.

HENRY WALLACE, one of the most idealistic New Dealers, is not a happy man. He has parked some of his ideals on the shelf and has decided to go along on a course of political expediency.

For all practical purposes, Chester Davis, Administrator of the AAA, is now Secretary of Agriculture. Wallace is loved for his charm, his naivete, his simplicity of manner, his idealism, but he has lost some of the respect he once commanded.

FRANCIS PERKINS, Secretary of Labor, is one of the hardest working members of the official family, but also one of the most unhappy. She has done a good job in the social phases of her work—child and female labor, labor statistics, unemployment, etc., but she has been "boxed" on the most important work of all—labor conciliation.

In this field, first General Johnson, then Donald Richberg, and to a certain extent Francis Biddle, have completely thwarted her.

Homeb Cummings—Attorney General, is the most genial and good-natured member of the official family. Next to Parley he is also the most politically-minded. Political considerations count more with him than those of merit, and as a result his appointments are among the worst in the New Deal.

Cummings, Justice Department, is more steeped in red tape than any other, and important law cases move forward with the slowness of a tortoise, although without that creature's perseverance.

In recent months, Homer has built up a barrage of publicity regarding his work of corralling gangsters which has successfully thrown the spotlight away from his other defects.

JAMES ALOYSIUS FARLEY, Postmaster General, still remains the most battered member of the Cabinet, though his inequivalent comeback at Hony Long has partly restored his badly plucked plumage.

Jim has kept off the political firing line as far as possible and is trying to rebuild the efficiency of his Post Office department, which suffered sadly during his peregrinations about the country. He has adopted the cue of lying low and saving little.

However, he is still besieged by jobholders and it is doubtful whether anyone who is both Postmaster General and National Committeeman can long be low.

CLAUDE AUGUSTUS SWANSON is no more Secretary of the Navy than Dern is Secretary of War. Not only is he in the hands of his admirals, but also he is in the hands of the President.

Roosevelt, for eight years assistant secretary of the Navy, cannot resist poking his fingers continually into his old department.

Swanson is heart about a big Navy man, but probably if he had had his hand on things he would not have permitted confusion in the award of cruise contracts. He has been thoroughly worried by the disclosures of the Senate Munitions Committee.

HAROLD E. ICKES, Secretary of the Interior, continues to be the hardest working and most uncompromising member of the Cabinet. Despite the abuse heaped upon his head in recent months, he maintains a vigorous sense of humor and just as much eagerness for a scrap.

His tracks have been less deviating toward New Deal goals than that of any other Cabinet officer.

DANIEL CALHOUN ROYER, is Secretary of Commerce in name,

DRESSMAKERS DAUGHTER

By James Noble Gifford

When Carol Morris, widowed mother, a small-town dressmaker, suddenly dies, Carol sets out for New York to seek a career. There, she takes a job in Morgan's department store, where she is soon promoted. Meanwhile, John Clark, a home-town beau, has asked her to come back home and marry him, but Carol's ambition is to achieve success. She is unexpectedly given a chance to buy for Morgan's in Paris, but her purchases fail to sell, and she is discharged. At this point, John suddenly turns up again, on his way to Paris, and he too proud to tell him that she has lost her job, and John, believing that she is well on the way to the success she wanted, does not renew his suit.

Think of waiting for a check. Life had suddenly become as if there were no money in all the world.

Carol possessed a few things she could sell to raise enough money for the bare necessities of life. But even they were finally exhausted. She had nothing left but clothes and, after all, she couldn't take a dress on her arm and try to peddle it on the streets.

Finally, she broke her last dollar to drink a glass of milk and eat a doughnut at a stand on Sixth Avenue. While she was drinking the milk, she kept thinking of that wonderful dinner in Paris when she had danced with the Russian Grand Duke. That was only a few months ago, but seemed years.

CHAPTER XXIII
DURING the next day or two, as Carol walked the streets looking for work, she had plenty of time to think. At least, one thing was settled. The theater was a closed door to her. Saunders had not spoken unkindly when he had told her he did not feel she had the proper temperament, but he had meant it. And somehow, that had hurt.

One day, she met Mr. Jackson on the street. He was about to tip his hat and pass on but she blocked his path and spoke to him.

Mr. Jackson, I'm sorry to have to appear to you in this way, but isn't there some hope of making the officials at Morgan's change their minds about me? I really need a position very badly. Could you get back my old job in your office? I did do that successfully, now didn't I?

She had to swallow her last vestige of pride to say what she did. But Mr. Jackson only shook his head slowly that day.

"I'm sorry for what happened Miss Morris, because it seemed at first that you were going to be a valuable assistant for me. But then, you didn't turn out that way. I'm awfully sorry."

"But I tried my best, Mr. Jackson."

"I'm sure you did. But that doesn't help any, does it? The things you bought simply are not selling. I have never seen things like so dead in our store. You've created a more serious problem than we've had in many years. It's not natural you should be let go."

She leaped a jump in her throat. "But Mr. Jackson, couldn't you do something for me?"

His jaw tightened. "Miss Morris, I hadn't intended telling you about it, but now you force me to do so. Because of you I nearly lost my own position, and it will take me some time, probably to regain the confidence of the press. I suppose you never thought of that. Now please don't make me say any more about it. She stepped aside, and he walked past."

DURING the next two or three weeks, Carol really feared what it means to be hard up in a big city. Sometimes at night when she was lying in bed, she remembered John's words back in Morris-town. "There are a million jobs in New York," she had said. And he had laughed and replied, "Yes and seven million people waiting for them." She now realized how true this was.

After the third week she had managed to get credit on her room rent because of the large amount of baggage she possessed. She told the woman in charge of the residence club that she was waiting for a check. Reporters were so smart the woman could not help but believe her. It seemed funny, though, to

THE OLD MAN was seated at his desk and looked up quickly at her entrance. He was obviously startled at anyone forcing her way in so abruptly. "Mr. Oliver, I must talk to you!"

The old man rose to his feet slowly as he recognized Carol. With a wave of his hand, he dismissed his assistant, and when the door had closed behind her, he held out his hand.

"Miss Morris, I am glad to see you. Come sit down and tell me about yourself. I'm in an awful fix. I've come to you because I feel you're the only person I can go to. You know of course that I lost my job here at Morgan's. But I've got to have work. I've actually broken my last dollar. I've got to have a job. Please, can't you give me one?"

"Here?" he said manly.

"Yes, Mr. Oliver, I don't mean a job with a future. I mean just any kind of a job, so I can have something to eat and pay my room rent. I'm not proud now, am I not particular. I'll do anything. Can't you put me in the basement, somewhere, where the officials wouldn't even know I'm here?"

He looked at her thoughtfully. "Do you know what the basement means? Do you want to sell cheap crockery? Do you want pots and things like that?"

Carol met his gaze squarely. "Yes," she said.

"I'll signed 'All right, then.' Report tomorrow morning, at eight o'clock."

NRA FIGHTING FOR LIFE ON TWO FRONTS

WASHINGTON, March 11.—UP—NRA fought for its life on two fronts today.

Donald R. Richberg, "assistant" President of the United States, went up to Congress burdened with facts, statistics and graphs, in an attempt to convince the Senate Finance committee that NRA was helping to carry the country out of the depression, and that a law should be passed extending its life for two more years.

COURT HEARS CASE

Over in another part of the capitol the nine black-robed justices of the Supreme Court listened to arguments in a case that can mean life or death to NRA. Technically the case is known as the Spielman Motor Sales Co. suit. That firm was trying to convince the court that the government had no right to interfere with its business.

The lower courts have peppered the NRA with decisions that held it was unconstitutional. But this was the first time the Supreme Court—from which there is no appeal—had been confronted with the problem of whether the organization, that started two years ago with torchlight parades, zealous speeches and crusading fervor, violated the constitution.

ISSUE TOLD

As is often the case, the Supreme Court refused to say yes or no immediately. Instead, it ordered the lawyers to expand their briefs and bring in fuller arguments.

The specific issue is this: Among the hundreds of laws and regulations promulgated by NRA is one that pertains to automobile dealers. It sets up a schedule for the amount that a dealer can allow on a used car when a man comes in and wants to trade in his old automobile for a new one. Suppose the code specified that the Spielman Co. could allow a maximum of $250 for a 1933 Chevrolet. Instead they allow $300; and William C. Dodge, prosecuting attorney for New York county, accused them of violating the law, and taking advantage of their competitors.

FEELING ASKED

What the Spielman Co. wanted the Supreme Court to do today was to rule the NRA unconstitutional and restrain Dodge from further action. Some decision will come later, provided the Supreme Court decides it has jurisdiction over the case. If not, the filing of the lower court will stand.

Richberg walked into a lion's den today when he appeared before the finance committee. He is chairman of the President's Emergency Recovery Council, charged with the duty of coordinating and defending all the alphabetical creatures of the New Deal.

Committee members sat at an elevated horseshoe table. Democrats on Richberg's left; Republicans on his right. Two years have wrought many changes in those senators. Republican, who voted against the NRA in the desperate days of two years ago, sat silent today. Democrats who argued and pleaded for the creation of NRA, flung complaint after complaint at Richberg. He parried some of them, but admitted there was reason for complaints on some of the points brought up.

State Scores Important Point At Lamson Trial

SAN JOSE, March 11.—UP—The prosecution scored its first telling blow against David Lamson today when a witness testified he found a blood clot more than six feet from the bath-tub in which Mrs. Lamson's body was found.

The witness, Frank A. Haggood, undertaker who took charge of the body, said he found the blood clot on the south window of the bathroom.

As he testified, a near life size photograph of Mrs. Lamson's body the arms flung over sides of the bathtub, her hair streaming downward to a pool of blood, was placed before the jury.

Introduction of the picture created the same shocked stir in the jury of seven men and five women that it did when the photograph taken by police was exhibited at Lamson's first trial.

Lamson gazed momentarily at the photo, flushed slightly and then turned his eyes toward the floor.

Haggood's testimony struck squarely at the defense case. Lamson and his attorneys have maintained that she died from head injuries received when Mrs. Lamson fell in the tub, striking her head on a washbasin.

The first measure, which was adopted makes it a misdemeanor to solicit the buying of tickets over the telephone for any dance, entertainment or other amusement.

Later in the meeting, H. H. Tomason, a crocer objected to the ordinance but he was informed the ordinance was enacted into law at the request of George F. Black, the president of the Richmond Grocers' Association, who claimed the ticket selling was becoming a racket, and was a nuisance to everyone.

The second ordinance, which will be adopted next Monday night, is for the protection of those who attend shooting galleries and skating rinks.

It amends the present business license ordinance and provides that applicants for permits for such amusements must take out public liability insurance to the extent of $5,000.

BRITISH MOB PROTESTS ON ARMS BUDGET

LONDON, March 11.—UP—Men and women in evening clothes, occupying galleries reserved for British elite and members of the diplomatic corps, dramatically interrupted tonight's debate in the House of Commons with cries against "preparation."

The demonstration was begun by a well dressed woman who shouted from the gallery, "Not a penny for war—tear up the White Paper!" She showered sheets of leaflets down upon the members of the House.

She referred in her outburst to the "White Paper" which had declared Germany was rearming and that Great Britain must so likewise to maintain its frontier in the Rhine.

Before attendants could seize and eject her, she had scattered hundreds of leaflets through the House.

Meanwhile, from 300 to 400 spectators, also dressed in the most meticulous fashion, including Maude Royden, Beverly Nichols, Prof. C. E. M. Joad and others from the London School of Economics, the Fabian Society, and the League of Nations union, were busily summoning members of Parliament out into the lobby, nearly emptying the House.

DEFENDS CABINET

Despite the interruptions, Sir John Simon, defending the government's decision to embark on a naval building program, and his alarming White Paper continued his speech to the end and ridiculed the Laborites' attempts to show that the present budget is "beyond all reason."

And the result of all the flurry was that the Commons gave an overwhelming vote of confidence to the government's policy, rejecting the Laborites' motion of censure by a vote of 424 to 224.

Simon showed, in the closing moments of his speech, that "while it is true that the armaments estimates are up 4,000,000 pounds sterling (about $65,000,000) nevertheless the total of 1935-36 is less than the appropriation of the first Labor government in 1924-25."

Simon's speech was a masterpiece of logic and eloquence, and was a nuisance to everyone.

The second ordinance, which will be adopted next Monday night, is for the protection of those who attend shooting galleries and skating rinks.

It amends the present business license ordinance and provides that applicants for permits for such amusements must take out public liability insurance to the extent of $5,000.

YOUR GOOD HEALTH

By C. N. CHRISTIAN, M.D.

Parrot Fever Can Be Acquired Very Easily by Fondling Bird Who Is Sick

IN OUR climate we stay in the house closely, and if we keep parrots or parakeets our association with them is more direct, and our chances of becoming infected by possible parrot fever virus from the birds are increased. Parrot fever is an acute infectious disease contracted by man from parrots, parakeets, love birds, canaries, and also finches who are carriers of the disease.

The most culpable bird in carrying the disease has been found, not to be the parrot, but the small parakeet, because a small number of them are in the market. It occurs much more frequently in California than in any other state. These birds are bred and raised there in large numbers.

It is easily carried from one bird to another and it has even been discovered in chickens that have come in contact with these birds. If this condition becomes general, I don't think of the increase in the number of parrot fever cases.

One which has the disease is a small bird with profuse discharge from the nose and eyes, diarrhea and loss of appetite. It looks sick and any close contact with the bird as in examining and fondling at this time may lead to the disease.

IN HUMANS, this fever usually begins suddenly, from eight to ten days after contact, with general weakness, headache, backache, inflammation of the eyes, chills and fever, followed by insomnia, delirium, abdominal pain, and tenderness, constipation, and a dry cough.

It appears very much like typhoid fever, except that typhoid develops more slowly. The fever rises rapidly and stays high till the second or third week when it slowly declines. In man, the peculiar part of the body attacked is the lung. It starts as a consolidating pneumonia deep under the upper part of the breast bone and spreads to the other lung frequently toward the lower left lung. It differs from lobar pneumonia in that there is not much pleurisy, very little pain, and not much difficult breathing.

It develops slowly, and a diagnosis can be made only by the use of the X-ray. The cough is usually dry, and only late in the disease is much sputum produced. The lung tissue resembles very much the pneumonia of influenza. The diagnosis is not easy to make.

When a case develops sudden fever, chills, headache, insomnia, and general weakness, with an unproductive cough, which resembles typhoid fever, influenza, or a low grade pneumonia, in a person who is associated with birds that appear sick, parrot fever must be suspected. X-rays of the lungs and microscopic examination of the sputum will show the fever. The death rate is said to be quite high, thirty-five to forty per cent, but this is probably too great, as there are many mild cases that are never diagnosed.

THE treatment is very unsatisfactory. The use of serum made from mice who have been inoculated with the germs is probably helpful. The most important thing is to stay away from birds of the parrot family when they are sick. The disease is carried by the nasal secretions and is breathed into the system. In fact, birds of any sort should never be held close to the face.

ANSWERS TO QUESTIONS: Mrs. C. F. H. asks about general pains all over her body and the use of batteries for the trouble. Your condition is one of general muscular rheumatism. You can continue to take electrolytes indefinitely, provided you also take a teaspoonful or more of baking soda a day to prevent acidity. Continue to take salts enough to overcome all indications of constipation.

Mrs. G. F. says her small boy is a polypus in the nose. Local astringent applications by your physician may reduce the size of the growth sufficiently. It is not successful in a short time. The removal is necessary and the growth prevents free breathing and intake of oxygen. The probabilities are that he has encephalitis (brain back in the head) which will cause more destruction. This congested area furnishes a good soil for the growth of diseases such as colds, measles, scarlet fever, pneumonia, diphtheria, and other throat infections.

Guide to Charm

HANDS SHOULD BE CARED FOR DAILY AFTER 35

By JACQUELINE HUNT

EVERY woman should not only try to keep all of the beauty with which she was blessed, but try to add to it as the years go on. You may think you have done your part when you learn to use your cosmetics skillfully and to dress tastefully, but much of your attractiveness may be lost through neglected hands. Treat your hands respectfully as you do the rest of you; make them lovely and expressive.

Hands tell so much about you—your worries and toll, your restlessness, your courage and your age. Especially after you are thirty-five they must have definite daily care. At night massage them thoroughly with a lotion that has an oily base, or better still take the time to massage in a good nourishing cream, the same kind you use around your eyes or massage into your throat when it shows the first wrinkle.

To massage the hands, take a small amount of the cream and rub it between the fingers and back of the hand with an upward, rotary motion. Use the thumb to massage the knuckles and the little pads of flesh at the base of each finger in the palm.

Use the base of your thumb to massage the palm of the hand and bend the hand back and forth, working the fingers in and out to relax the muscles of the palm and keep the hand supple.

After the upward massage from fingertips to wrist, smooth each finger down to the tip, pinching the tip slightly to shape it. Work the cream carefully around the fingernails to soften the cuticles and to help overcome extreme dryness and brittleness. Incidentally this little trick not only keeps the nails healthy but it will make your manicure and polish last about twice as long.

Once or twice a week give your nails a hot oil bath with warm olive oil or sweet oil. Soak the fingers in the oil for five minutes or more and then massage it around the nails and joints, into the wrists and all the way up to and into the elbows. It is also a good idea to soak the elbows in the warm oil while you are at it if you want to keep them soft and free from calluses or that dingy look that is such a common winter complaint.

If gloves do not make you too uncomfortable, then do leave the extra cream or oil on your hands overnight, slipping on the loose cotton gloves that will protect the skin, but that will not interfere with your circulation.

Rinse the hands thoroughly when you get up in the morning and apply a lotion before you go about your household tasks. At the same time, wash the hands thoroughly with soap and water with the aid of a complexion brush.

Emperor Haile Selassie I of Abyssinia Is Complete Ruler—and Almost God—of His Country

ABYSSINIA (or Ethiopia) to the average American offers nothing more than a chance to make a pun. Generally speaking, it is hard for you to take it seriously. But recently, with Mussolini's troops moving into the heart of the African kingdom, it has taken on a dignity that stems back to 1896 and again back to the days of the Queen of Sheba.

For one thing, it is necessary to look more closely at Emperor Haile Selassie I, the most erudite man of the kingdom, and a person who stands as a menace to Italian arms. The world has been somewhat inclined to regard the Italian invader as a tyrant, but historians recently have unearthed some facts about the invasion of that empire by the Italians in 1896. The emperor then was King Menelik II. He ruled great-uncle, and it must be said he made the miserable lot of the Italians. He let them come in at all right, but then the native warriors fought from ambush and captured and ate 1,000 of the Italian army.

QUESTION: "Please tell me what to do for my double chin. It isn't bad yet, but it seems to be getting worse every day, and it spoils my appearance."—T. A.

Cleanse your neck thoroughly when you cleanse your skin at night and then pat the neck with an astringent tonic and "smack" the under-chin area smartly with the backs of your hands. Neck exercises are also good. Clasp your hands firmly behind your head and pull down firmly so you are doing the exercises against a resistance. Push the head as far back as you can, then move it to the left and do the right, holding each position long enough to count five. Repeat left and right about ten times.

QUESTION: "I am thirty-five and have just realized that I look older. I believe my hair is partly at fault, since it is quite straight and is getting thin and streaked with gray. I have always worn my hair long, but like to cut it now if it won't make me look too girlish."—Mrs. Spencer.

Go ahead and have your hair cut, but plan to wear it fairly short and smooth around the hairline in the back. You can learn to wave your hair and comb it into soft-natural-looking lines, or you might have a permanent. You should have some waves or curls to make your hair look softer and thicker. If you wish, I will send you a copy of my leaflet on "Beautiful Hair" on receipt of a stamped, self-addressed envelope.

EVERYONE knows how good honey is with hot biscuits, waffles or muffins whether it is the strained honey or the honey still in the comb. But how many of you use honey to give a subtle, deliciously different flavor to other dishes. If you have never cooked with honey there are many surprises in store for you.

The most economical way to buy honey for cooking purposes is to get the five-pound pails of extracted honey. Keep it in a place that is thoroughly dry and quite warm so the honey will not turn to sugar. If this happens, however, do not think that it is harmed in any way. Just set the pail in a bowl of hot water until the honey is melted again.

When cooking with honey have it quite warm so it will pour easily. When serving with muffins or hot biscuits, it is most delightful if chilled until very thick. In cooking dishes in which honey is used for direct cooking, cook at a fairly low temperature, as honey burns easily and loses some of its fine flavor if there is too much heat.

Parrot a half or whole h m for twenty minutes to the pound in water to which four cups pineapple juice or gingerale has been added. Remove the ham from the liquid and remove the skin. Pour over two cups honey and let stand overnight. The next day add enough liquid in which the ham was cooked to allow for basting frequently. Rub the skinned surface of the ham with fine, dry bread crumbs, mark into diamonds with a sharp knife and bake in a moderate oven. Baste frequently with the liquid to which one cup chopped maraschino cherries have been added. Bake for about an hour or until the ham is nicely browned and glazed. Garnish with parsley.

Spiced Cottage Pudding: Cream one-half cup shortening, add one cup sugar and cream until fluffy before adding two tablespoons honey. Mix one-half teaspoon each of cloves and cinnamon, one teaspoon of baking soda and sift together with two cups pre-sifted and measured flour. Add three-fourths cup water, alternately with the flour mixture. Stir well and pour into a fat buttered pan. Bake in a slow oven for about an hour. Cut into squares and serve with a sauce made from one-third cup heavy cream, one-third cup honey, one-half cup sugar and three egg yolks and 1 until fruitfulness.

The mixture is light. Stir in one teaspoon vanilla and one-half cup chopped nut meats. ## MODES AND MANNERS

QUESTION: "How should an old family servant be addressed in a letter? Also, how should such a letter be signed? Mrs. Smith, 'Mrs. John Smith,' or 'Mary Smith'?"—Mrs. B. H. K.

ANSWER: In addressing a servant it is correct to write, "My dear Mabel." In the case of a man servant, and if you are in the habit of calling him by his last name, you may write, "My dear Jones." Instead of "My dear George." The title "Mrs." should not appear in the signature. The name should be signed "M. Smith" for "Mary Smith." The use of the initial being in better taste in such a case for the Christian name.

QUESTION: "How did the custom of throwing rice after a newly wedded pair originate?"—Harvey P.

ANSWER: This custom dates back to primitive times, when rice and grain were regarded as symbols of productivity. It was still, is, though in modern times the meaning of this custom is not generally known—a way of wishing the bride and groom a fruitfulness.

You and Your Child

HER CHILDREN'S WARFARE OFTEN DUE TO MOTHER

By JANE HERBERT GOWARD

IF QUESTIONED about it, Mrs. Haines no doubt would deny that any rivalry existed between her two children. Yet one can hear her appealing to their brotherliness or sisterliness all the time to make them stop quarrelling. Bob teases Esther. He pulls her hair or gives her a push and runs, when he thinks he can get away with safety. For Esther is his senior by a year and more than his equal in strength. Besides, a boy of nine has better sense than to fight with a girl. This seems to be an unwritten law in the boys' code of ethics; but there is no clause apparently prohibiting a boy from playing tricks on a girl, or from teasing her or from frightening her half to death.

Is it natural for boys, brothers in particular, to behave in this manner toward their sisters? If the parents grow up in families where the children constantly help me also. What is your opinion of a husband who secretly withholds from twenty to twenty-five dollars of his salary each month? We have numerous bills, including payments on a car, which must be met every month, and after they are all paid, there is nothing left with which to buy the little things I need.

"My dear Mrs. Martin: You have helped so many others. I wonder if you wouldn't help me also. What is your opinion of a husband who secretly withholds from twenty to twenty-five dollars of his salary each month? We have numerous bills, including payments on a car, which must be met every month, and after they are all paid, there is nothing left with which to buy the little things I need.

"I have kindly asked my husband to share with me what is left after the bills are paid, but he swears there is nothing left. But to quote one of your readers, 'I know what I know.' Would so much appreciate your advice."

"Discouraged."

BEFORE passing judgment on your husband, are you quite sure that you are not condemning him on circumstantial evidence alone? Are you sure that he withholds this amount of money from you, or do you just imagine that he does? Do you know the amount of his salary, and have you done a fair job in adding up his expenses and yours?

It is quite possible that your husband is saving this money for the proverbial rainy day, and that he feels you might be inclined to take a chance on the weather and spend as you go. You are the only one who knows whether this is a possible solution of the reason for his actions or not.

You are also the best judge as to whether your husband's attitude about money is consistent with his character. If he is a very secretive man you must expect him to be secretive also about money. If he is not, there is, I must admit, more significance in his stand on the financial question.

I suppose you have talked with him about it and shown your resentment. He may be one of those men who never know where their money went, and that's rather a characteristic of most men.

During the course of the day the average man spends much more money than a woman. A great deal of a man's money goes up in smoke, tips, and incidentals women are usually spared. You mention having a car. Have you considered at all the gas and oil your husband may have paid for out of his own pocket when you were on the road? The movie money he may have spent—the little gifts he may have made you?

Please do not come to the conclusion that I side against you. I am just trying to point out to you that money goes very quickly in incidentals, and that the average man assumes the burden of them.

I think it shows a lack of confidence in one's wife for a man to withhold any knowledge of his income, but I am fair-minded enough to admit that he might have a very good reason for doing so.

Don't nurse your grievances or let your imagination run riot and suspect your husband of all manner of things. It's possible that your arithmetic is wrong. I don't need to tell you not to nag your husband about this, but if you are sure you are arithmetically correct, try to give him a lesson in ethics.

Where a Wife Believes Her Husband Is Holding Out a Portion of Salary Each Month

WHEN marriage unites two persons of diametrically opposed temperaments there is bound to result something closely resembling trouble. An outspoken, open and above-board person is sure to be annoyed by the airs of mystery the secretive person surrounds himself with. And even the very frank and straightforward persons are often extremely close-mouthed about their money.

"My dear Mrs. Martin: You have helped so many others. I wonder if you wouldn't help me also. ## LONG POINTS OUT DANGERS IN NEW BILL the revenue from the gas tax is about $91,000,000 every biennium, and with a cost of $128,000,000 for road expense, you can readily see that the State could not save $36,000,000 every two years, but on the other hand would be in the hole over $37,000,000.

"There are many jokers in the bill. Two years ago there was a relief bond issue for $20,000,000 and this county borrowed $20,000 of it to carry on the work in this county. Every cent of this has to be repaid at 4 percent interest, and to guarantee the State its repayment, the latter would keep a certain part of the gas tax allocations over a period of ten years. If the proposed law is enacted, no more of the gas tax comes to this county, and still the $20,000 has to be repaid.

"Another provision of the bill provides for another cent of gas tax, ostensibly for the relief of the unemployed, which is a laudable purpose, but is a normal condition return, who is to say when it is to be taken off? You can rest assured it will never be done.

"If you will read the bill carefully you will find that it also provides that all county road machinery and all moneys in the road funds that have not been used, must be turned over to the State by October 15, without any compensation to this county at all. This county is now the owner of road equipment of the value of $100,000.

"The supervisors of this State are fighting this measure to the last ditch, and it is our intention to present a bill that will allocate the gas tax three ways, one cent to the State, one cent to the county, and one cent to the municipality. At the present time, the plan is to give municipalities but one half a cent. In this connection the proposed bill has a provision to the effect that the State can condemn a bridge in a city, abandon it, and then compel the municipality to still maintain it.

"The closer your government is to you the better you are off. If the State had control of all highways in California, what chance would a couple of farmers on a minor road have in getting any relief?

"I am not asking the council to take any action in this matter, but I want you to know the facts, so that you can seriously think them over. The question is a vital one, the high must be carried on, or you will find some day that you have no voice in government at all."

Liquidation Of Building Loan Firms Is Shown

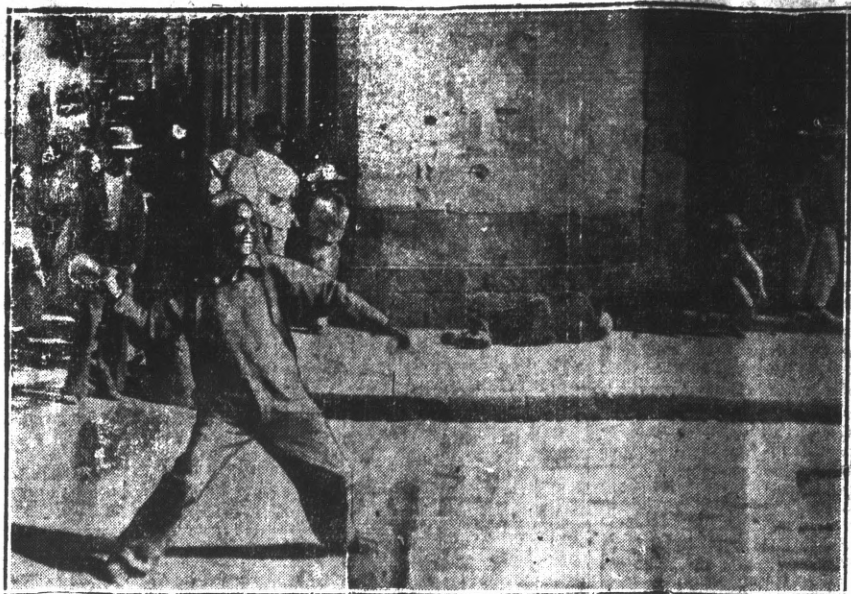

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—UP.—Wholesale liquidation of building and loan associations continued during 1934, with $71,096,297 of assets disposed of in the year, according to the second annual survey of H. R. Baker and company here.

The selling has materially improved the associations' financial condition, it was stated. Their resources December 31, 1934, were $266,127,144, compared with $329,229,441 the year previous.

The investment firm's survey showed 26 of 46 associations members of the Federal Home Bank, 32 paying the 4 percent legal maximum, only eight paying no interest, and 31 permitting withdrawal on principal.

Leading S. F. Hotels Facing Ban On Liquor

SAN FRANCISCO, March 11.—UP.—Police opened a new liquor drive today by asking the State to suspend 35 San Francisco liquor licenses, including those of the fashionable Mark Hopkins and Plaza hotels.

At the same time, the board of equalization, State licensing body, moved to override police activities. John C. Corbett, San Francisco member of the board, agreed to only three police protests against applicants and recommended licenses for 22 others to whom the police had objected.

As the hotel bar closings were urged, Capt. Charles F. Skelly, secretary of the police commission, declared:

"The investigation is not over. Action will be taken against other places if we learn they do not conform to the law as we see it. These 35 places operate bars not equipped as bona fide restaurants."

Hotel men were indignant at the new drive. "Our bar is run no different from those in other hotels," said George D. Smith, manager of the Mark Hopkins. "I'm at a loss," added H. R. Strohl, general manager of the Plaza operating company. "We serve the same meals in our taproom as in the grill."

WOMAN SAVED IN FIRE WILL FACE CHARGES

Rescued from a fire that nearly claimed her life, Mrs. Dixie Long, 25, of 631 1/2 St. street, struggled with police and firemen who had rescued her, and was finally taken to a hospital to face a superior court hearing on an inebriety charge.

On Sunday Mrs. Long evidently started a fire in her bedroom while smoking in bed. Fire Chief W. P. Cooper and police reported. They declared that the woman was intoxicated at the time. A neighbor turned in the fire alarm.

Fire Chief W. P. Cooper entering the burning bedroom, found the woman lying partly clothed upon the floor, and dragged her out with the assistance of two of his men, Merriam and W. R. Hemel. Firemen then extinguished the blaze which did $1000 damage.

When Mrs. Long was revived by the fresh air, she allegedly attempted to battle with police and firemen and had to be taken to the police station.

According to police reports, Mrs. Long and her husband, George Long, were arrested in February and both were given jail sentences for intoxication. The husband is still serving his term. At the time of their arrest, the Longs charged that they were mistreated by police, declaring that arresting officers had beaten the woman.

However, a city council committee investigating the charges, cleared the officers of all blame. Officers say that both Mr. and Mrs. Long have been arrested several times on intoxication charges.

body unto itself and the supervisors had nothing to do with it. Long said the supervisors did not bring indictments, neither did it know what the grand jury was doing at all times.

Mayor George F. Imbach also told the complainant that the council had no power to ask a grand jury to give out information.

City Attorney Tom Carlson further enlightened Thomason by saying the grand jury was a secret body, and if they revealed their proceedings they would be committing a misdemeanor. To request the council to seek such information, would be asking that body to ask the grand jury to do something unlawful.

In regard to another of Thomason's complaints, Fire Chief Cooper told the gentleman that the complaint had been sworn to, and a warrant for the arrest of the man issued. Thomason meekly replied that he had not read about it.

In regard to the suggestion that five councilmen should be elected this year, Thomason was informed that the city charter controlled the matter, and the only way to change existing conditions was to frame a new charter, which was in the hands of the citizens of the city, and not the council.

There still were some conflicting reports about the destination and flight of some of the rebellion's prime movers. The rebel cruiser Helle reportedly arrived at Cassandria peninsula during the afternoon, surrendered, and was ordered to enter the Port of Salonika, to take off the governmental commander.
